2. MATERI AUDIO

a. Transkrip monolog

NARRATOR:

A long time ago in Borneo, people lived in the forest. They lived peacefully. They lived together in longhouses, farmed in groups and shared their belongings.

Unfortunately, their peaceful lives didn't last forever. Problems started to arise. Gossip spread and conflict, hatred, and other human problems emerged that made their lives uncomfortable.

Some of them decided to separate, as they wanted to have a peaceful life again. They went deep into the forest. They created a new community and lived peacefully for years.

As time passed by, many people wanted to join their quiet lifestyle until one day, their life in the forest was no longer peaceful. The village became overcrowded and problems grew day by day.

Once again, the group split up to pursue a quieter, more peaceful life. This time a small group went to a mountain and lived there in harmony. But, over time more people joined their community, which disrupted the harmony.

These peaceful people couldn't stand it anymore. They chose to climb up to the top of the trees and stay there forever. They cut themselves off from all other people.

From that day on, the people who lived on land could only see them in the trees. And that's how they got their name, orangutan, which in Indonesian and Malay means "people (orang) of the forest (utan)".

Unfortunately, nowadays their peaceful lives are threatened once again. People continue to cut down their homes, and hunt and exploit them as pets. One day, we might see them only in the zoo. How miserable!
